英語 (その5)

Ⅳ 次の文章を読んで、以下の間に答えなさい。

“I’m so bored today!” my sister, Linda said to me during morning break. “Let’s *pretend we’re sick. Then we can go home and play until Mom and Cheryl come home.” Cheryl was our little sister who goes to *kindergarten near our mother’s office.

“Great!” I answered, without thinking it well. I respected my big sister and would do anything to be with her.

“Shhhh!” Linda said silently, and then touched her stomach. “Ooooo, my stomach hurts!”

“①Mine, too!” I said, *winking.

Soon after returning to class, I asked to go to the toilet. When I came back, I said to Mrs. Brown, my teacher, ②with my best stomachache look, “I’m feeling sick. I think I should go and see the nurse.”

“③I’m sorry, dear,” she said.

The voice inside my head was saying, “( ④ ),” but I said, “Thanks.”

The nurse asked me some questions, told me to sit down on the bed and softly *stroked my head. When she returned thirty minutes later, I *told some more lies — ⑤BIG ones. I said that I felt worse and that I just called my mother. I also said that I thought she just left the office to meet me at home. The nurse checked my file and suddenly began to call my mother’s office! I was surprised and *held my breath. ⑥After a million rings, she put the phone down. “No answer. You’re right. Your mom’s on her way home. You go straight there, OK?”

“I promise,” I answered. I was *super-relieved that my mother was away from her desk.

Linda wasn’t home when I arrived, but I thought she would come home soon. I couldn’t wait to play with my big sister! As I was bored, I opened my lunchbox and ate my sandwich. I imagined my friends in the cafeteria eating and laughing together. I kept looking out of the window and thinking about what my classmates were doing.

Still no Linda, and nothing to do. I went into my mother’s bedroom and started checking her things. I put on some lipsticks, earrings and necklaces. I changed from my school uniform into one of my mother’s *sparkly black dresses and some shining high heels. But I got bored soon. I walked into the living room and sat down on the sofa.

Several minutes later, I finally heard a key in the door. Before I could call at Linda with joy, ⑦my mouth fell open in shock. *Instead of my sister, my mother was walking into the room! I couldn’t say anything. I couldn’t move. Mom came straight to me. “I came home from work because I wanted the *plumber to check the kitchen. ⑧(I / are / ask / you / may / what / doing) here, young lady?”

I tried to say, “I, I, I’m … ah … sick?”

“Well, ⑨you look fine in my dress,” my mother answered quietly.

“I had a stomachache, but I’m better now,” I answered.

“That’s good,” my mother said. “Then you can go back to school, can’t you?”

“Yes, ma’am,” I answered, standing up and going to my room.

“Where are you going?” asked Mom.

“My room… To put my uniform ( ⑩ ).”

“No, I think you should hurry,” she said. “Go get in the car quickly.”

I said, “I CAN’T WEAR THIS to school!”

“NOW!” was her answer.

I felt like a zombie and looked like a *clown. That silent short drive back to school seemed to continue forever. When we arrived, Mom got out with me, held my hand like a little kid and took me into my classroom. My friends laughed a lot. My mother shared the bad thing I did. Mrs. Brown looked sad as she asked me to sit down. I looked at my desk and tears dropped on my notebook. Now I really felt sick, but a different kind of sick.

I was laughed at all afternoon. Even worse, I had to walk home in that dress, and almost everyone in the school saw me. Someone shouted, “Hey! Halloween is in October!” At the house, I quickly changed clothes and washed off the makeup. When Cheryl and Mom got home, my little sister opened her arms and held me happily. Suddenly I knew Cheryl felt about me in the same way I felt about Linda. I hugged Cheryl *tighter than I ever ⑪did before.

Linda told me that when she got back into class, she noticed it was a bad plan and changed her mind. She thought that I would do the same way. ⑫She did the right thing, so I couldn’t get angry at her.

At bedtime, Mom kissed us three girls goodnight and left our room without saying another word. When the door closed, I started crying quietly. Sure, I would be really *embarrassed to see my friends tomorrow, but I felt terrible for doing something so *stupid — to my sweet teacher and that nice school nurse. When I stopped crying, I could hear both my sisters’ silent breath. They were already sleeping deeply. And I smiled. I learned more than one important lesson that day.

*注 : pretend ～のふりをする kindergarten 幼稚園 winking ウィンクしながら
stroke ～をなでる tell a lie うそをつく hold ～’s breath 息をのむ
super-relieved 本当にほっとした sparkly キラキラ光る Instead of ～ ～の代わりに
